power. Alexander Zaimis, the present Premier, who several days ago was reported to have resigned, would, it was said, retain his portfolio with the consent and approval of Venizelos.

DIPLOMATS DOUBTFUL.

The new course of Greece, as a result of these events, would be marked by an attitude of benevolent neutrality towards the entente powers, with later possible support of arms when the mobilization of the army had been completed. A message to the same effect was received later from the correspondent of the Reuter agency at Saloniki. This correspondent attached the warning

The Greek legation here, although interrupted, places no credence in the reports. The British foreign office, in reply to hundreds of inquiries, announced that it had received no confirmation of the reports.

The foreign office asserted, however, that proof had been received of revolutionary activities in Greece which have resulted in a battle between Venizelists and the Greek garrison of Saloniki. The seizure of two Greek forts by the revolutionary "committee" is reported. They are and, before dawn in the morning, a large force of revolutionists surrounded the barracks, cut the water-mains and electric light wires and shut off supplies of food.

SHOTS EXCHANGED.

A detachment from the garrison attempted to make its way out to obtain supplies, but was cut off by the besieging volunteers and ordered to surrender. When the regulars refused the volunteers fired shots in the air and were answered by a volley. The volunteers began to shoot and the regulars were forced to retreat.

The battle might have assumed serious proportions but for the timely intervention of General Merrill, commander-in-chief of the entente forces in the district. He brought up forces and suppressed the fighting. The commander of the Greek forces refused to treat with the revolutionists, but listened to the French officer, as a result of which the garrison capitulated, turned over their

GENTLEMEN,
I'M AN optimist.
AND I didn't believe.
UNTIL LATELY.
THAT YOU were really.
GOING TO strike.
AND NOW I don't know.
BUT WHAT maybe you are.
AND I'm terribly worried.
BECAUSE MY wife.
IS AWAY out.
ON THE Pacific Coast.
AND SHE was going to start home
TODAY.
AND SHE can't.
BECAUSE SHE can't tell.
WHERE SHE'd be.
IF YOU started the strike.
AND I want her.
I HAD an idea.
THAT THOSE.
WOULD BE a fine town.
TO BE free in.
FOR A little while.
AND I'd planned.
ON A lot of things.
I WAS going to do.
AND I don't do them.
I JUST wander.
LIKE A lost soul.
AND GO all by myself.
TO THEATRES.
AND PICTURE shows.

AND I'm having trouble.
WITH MY laundry.
I DON'T know what to do with it.
AND EVERYTHING'S dirty.
AND MY Palm Beach suit.
IT'S DIRTY.
AND I don't know who cleans them.
AND I can't tie.
A DRESS tie.
AND TONIGHT.
I'VE GOT to wear one.
AND the chambermaid.
WILL HAVE to tie it.
AND I don't think.
SHE CAN speak English.
SHE'S AN Irishman.
OR SOMETHING.
AND I'VE got back.
TO SMOKING cigarettes.
AND MY fingers.
ARE GETTING yellow.
AND I don't eat.
AT REGULAR hours.
AND I can't share.
THE BACK OF MY neck.
OR ANYTHING.
AND I want to ask you.
IF YOU'RE going to strike.
TO MAKE it as short.
AS YOU can.
IT'S JUST in jokes.
THAT MARRIED men.
HAVE A good time.
WITH THEIR wives away.
I THANK you.

THE situation warrants suspending the opening of schools.
Mayor Curley has requested Health Commissioner F. X. Mahoney to arrange a meeting between himself and the school committee at once to discuss the feasibility of opening the schools on October 3 instead of September 11, as originally planned.

NINE NEW VICTIMS.
Nine new cases in Massachusetts, including two in Boston, were announced in the morning bulletin of the State Health Department today. The total to date for the year is 414, divided as follows:
January 1 to July 1, 1916, 197
August 1 to July 1, 1917, 215
September 1 to July 1, 1918, 102
Total, 514

Thirty-three deaths resulted in August, the month in which the greatest number of cases has been reported.
Of the nine new cases announced by the State Health Department today, one was reported as "abortive," meaning that there was much doubt as to whether it was a real case of infantile paralysis or not. That case is listed, but not counted in the total.
The location and names in today's new list are:
Boston—Two cases, names and addresses withheld.
Barnstable—Lydia Irish of Hyannisport. (Came from Pittsburgh.)
Mansfield—Evelyn Phillips of Eddy street.
Somerville—Genera Silvio, No. 31 Elm street.
Stoughton—Sula Kontomaris, No. 111 Westmain street.
Weymouth—(Two cases.) Raymond Bender of West Holbrook; Albert J. Chick, No. 4 Temple street (aborted).
Worcester—Marta Weaver of Abington village.
Lynn—Rita Torbora, fourteen months, No. 53 Tremont street.

DOUBTLY LYNN SCORGE.
The new Lynn case is the second in two days and the third in a fortnight. Between the appearance of infantile paralysis and a typhoid outbreak with thirty-three cases in five days in West Lynn, the State Health authorities are taxed to their utmost.
The home of the Torbora baby, the latest Lynn paralytic victim, is across the street from that of four-year-old Marie Ditto, whose illness was reported yesterday. These homes on Pleasant street are only two streets away from Blossom street, where the Phillips boy lived who died a week ago.

The Ditto house adjoins the Washington primary school building. The children go. Parents of that school district are particularly alarmed. The local school committee was scheduled to meet today to consider postponement of school opening.
Olivia A. Draper, fifteen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sumner Draper of Milton, died of infantile paralysis at her home, 100 West Main street, West Chop, Martha's Vineyard.
Mr. Draper, who is one of the most prominent real estate men of Boston, took his family to the Vineyard early in the summer. Last Sunday Miss Draper visited Palmouth and it is supposed she contracted the disease there. She was taken ill soon after her return and the disease progressed rapidly until her death.

According to the health authorities at Vineyard Haven, this is the appearance of poliomyelitis on the island.
North Adams, with eight deaths, heads the list of fatal cases, and Boston follows closely with seven deaths.
SCHOOLS DELAY OPENINGS.
Abbott Academy has postponed its opening date from September 20 to September 27. Bradford Academy, after a recess, until after September 11. Milton schools until September 25. The Weymouth schools until September 11. The Andover and Hingham schools until September 11. The Worcester Academy until September 27.
Although definite action has not yet been taken by the authorities of the State schools, it is doubtful that they will reopen at the regular time, September 6.

Dr. Laura A. C. Hughes, who has just returned from New York, where she has been studying infantile paralysis, spoke on the subject of the danger at the rooms of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness. She emphasized the necessity for absolute cleanliness and caution when attending a patient suffering from the disease.
There have been 7,600 cases in New York since the beginning of the present outbreak, Dr. Hughes stated. The children in the Bellevue Hospital are under a screen-covered cover with practically no clothes. They are kept absolutely clean and are given light nourishing food. Owing to the lack of statistics, she estimated the disease in its early stages is most difficult to diagnose.

Society Has Ball for Plague Victims.
Governor McCall and Mrs. John H. Hammond led the grand march at the head-dress ball at the Ocean-side Hotel, Massachusetts, in aid of the Society for American Preparedness. The guests were present following Governor McCall and Mrs. Hammond came Mrs. John H. Hammond, Mrs. John Wood Blodgett, Mrs. Blodgett and Lady Aberdeen, Mrs. Karasavage, mistress of the ball, Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, wife of the United States chess champion in Mexico; Lieutenant-Commander H. Parke, Commander. Behind them followed Edward H. Flynn, Edmund H. Flynn, wife of Governor McCall, and Captain William H. Bush, commandant of the Navy Yard.

HUSBAND SHOOT WIFE AND BOARDER.
Worcester, Sept. 2.—With wife and boarder, thirty-eight, entered his home on Plum street, Worcester, on Monday night, and shot her and a boarder. The wife was killed and the boarder is in a critical condition. The husband is in custody of the police.

MAY ARBITRATE BAY STATE WAGES.
It is now considered probable that the new demands of the union of the Bay State Street Railway Company will have to go to arbitration, in view of the decision of the public service commission that the petition of the company for a 6-cent fare is not valid.

YOUTH, 16, TAKES OWN LIFE IN RIVER.
Edward Davies, Jr., sixteen, of Davis street, Cambridge, committed suicide by drowning in the Charles River. The boy jumped from the bridge at the second arch of the West Boston bridge into the river.

THE NEW SCENIC TEMPLE RE-OPENS MONDAY

The New Scenic Theatre, one of the most popular playhouses in East Boston, will reopen on Monday with a bill of vaudeville and pictures, beginning with a matinee at 2:30 p.m. The feature of the evening performance is "The American's Magazine" page daily will be shown every Monday and Tuesday. This unexpensive motion picture is shown by the International Film Service, with Grace Darling as Jimmy Barton.

SOKOL TOO ILL TO APPEAR AT HEARING.
David Sokol of No. 21 Stanfield street, failed to appear in court today in answer to the charge of assault on Mrs. Katherine Gionanni of Temple street, which resulted in Sokol being beaten by policemen. The partners in the case, Donnelly and Hogen, were not present when the case was called, and Judge Crowl ordered a continuance until later.

MRS. CASTLE BARELY ESCAPES DROWNING.
Newport, Sept. 2.—Mrs. Vernon Castle, who had been engaged in a motion picture play here several days, was nearly drowned between two rocks at the Newport beach by falling from a slippy rock, after the office into the rough sea below. She was helped out by Director James Gordon.

STEAMER STARTS TO DRIFT TO SEA.
Newport, Sept. 2.—The excursion steamer Fenian with 200 passengers, from this city for Providence, began to drift toward the open sea in a heavy fog after a high pressure cyclone had blown in from the north. The Fenian, another excursion steamer, toward her back to Newport.

Fear Ship Torpedoed.
Newport, Sept. 2.—Several fears are entertained in Rhode Island circles that the crew of the Fenian, which has disappeared in the Narragansett Bay, may have been torpedoed or struck by a mine.

Despondent Nurse Jumps Into River.
Boston, Sept. 2.—Despondency, brought on by ill health and financial reverse of her family, led Miss Minnie Barrett, a nurse at the Salem Hospital, to jump into the South River in an attempt to commit suicide, according to the police. She has recovered from her experience.

100,000 PERISH IN JERUSALEM PANIC.
London, Sept. 2.—A Syrian refugee, in an interview published in the Daily News, says that a famine is raging throughout the country from Aleppo to Jerusalem. Two-thirds of the inhabitants of villages in the neighborhood of Jerusalem have died of hunger or typhoid.

ARREST FOLLOWS RESCUE AT FIRE.
Four-year-old Charles MacDonald and his mother were rescued today by a policeman from a blazing bed at their third-floor home at No. 4 Wall street. The mother was then placed under arrest on a charge of intoxication.

WATER WINGS FATAL TO TAUNTON YOUTH.
Taunton, Sept. 2.—While bathing with two companions in the Taunton River, Carl Hines, fourteen, lost control of the swimming device which he was using and was carried by the depth by the swift currents of the river. He was unable to swim, was overcome to aid him.

Comet Loses to Church

Williams Wins Match

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 2.—George Myers Church of Tenafly, N. J., conqueror of I. Kuniak, the Japanese star, won from Maurice R. McLaughlin of California on the West Side Tennis Club courts, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Although it is said they "never come back," McLaughlin was so flustered in the first set for a short period in the fourth set. He electrified the crowd by his wonderful showing.

Trailing two sets to one and 3 to 6 in games, the Comet rallied. Church, who had lost in wonderful form right from the start, was unable to make any headway against the revitalized Californian.

He played as he did in the second and third sets, but before the fury of the Comet he was well near helpless. Then Church came on and played tennis of a sort which is seldom seen. The Comet's great stand, which never forgot it, it appeared for a while as if he was going to overhaul his opponent and pull out a victory in the face of a game which appeared to be considerably superior to his.

COMET FLASHES IN SPOTS.
Church won the first three games of this—the fourth set—and the Comet took the fourth. He broke through Church's service in the fifth and was the game by making a sensational first and a more sensational return which gained the outstanding racket of the match. Following this the Comet won the sixth game.

In the seventh, eighth and ninth games, Church was unplayable. He worked smoothly and brilliantly. The match came to a close with a terrific overhead smash by Church. The Comet started the service, and won the opening game. Church won the delivery and broke through the Comet's in the next. He followed this up by winning the fourth game, and here McLaughlin rallied. Trailing at 3 to 1, he equaled the set at 4 to 4 and eventually won the second set because some marked, adding this he dropped one game to the Comet. The fourth game in the set required twenty-two points.

HIGH-GRADE TENNIS.
The first three games were characterized by almost perfect tennis. The Comet broke through Church's service in the first game and in winning scored three placements. The fourth point was a set by the Comet in the second game. McLaughlin scored four placements, but even so lost the frame after it had been tied.

Boston Girls In Title Swim at Rye Beach
New York, Sept. 2.—Six women swimmers, among them from Boston, will try for the title of national champions, which will be contested today in the sanctioned meet to be staged by the Rye Beach Swimming Club.

Miss Claire Gulligan, the New Rochelle girl who has been practically unbeatable in Eastern swimming contests this season, will try for new laurels, and will carry the emblem of the National Women's Life Saving League against Miss Marion Gilman, a Boston star, and Miss McLaughlin of Philadelphia. Three others are also entered.

On the program there will be the metropolitan high diving contest and several other events, in addition to the stellar race for women. At 10 o'clock of the title will be defended by Arthur MacLennan, national fancy diving champion, who also won the mercury foot, in the diving event.

NAPOLÉON DIRECT PACES GREAT RACE
Toughspeak, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The 29,000 stake for 2000 paces, the feature of the closing program of the Grand Circuit meeting at the Hueton River Driving Park, was won in straight heats by Napoleon Direct, racing star of the stable of the veteran "Pop" Leary.

It was the fastest race ever paced over the local course, the first heat in 2:25, equalling the track record made by Del in 1925, and the second in 2:26, setting a new mark for the track.

The first heat, but a break early in the second failed his chances.

TEAM MATCH CALLED OFF.
Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—The East vs. West team match, which was to have been played yesterday as a preliminary to the national amateur golf championship, to be held next Monday at the Merion Cricket Club, was called off, as the Western players were unable to play their strongest team in the field.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX"

Novelized From the Great Film Play
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Novelized from the scenario of Beatrice Fairfax by Wharton, Inc., Studios for International Film Service.)

DIRECTLY my message came to Jimmy Barton, he had a dinner and a ray of hope that they would arrive within the half hour, and Jimmy had asked me to "hold the fort" in the meanwhile.

So I made my adventurous little climb up the fire escape, peering in window after window on my upward journey.

Darkness had fallen and the moon had not yet risen to soften the night with its silver sheen. Each apartment into which I peered had a look of warm coziness.

I felt rather pathetic and abused when I reflected that all these people were safe hours, and I was enjoying their dinners while I was groping around in the darkness.

Through a window on one of the upper floors I caught a glimpse of the little Mimosa San. I opened the window cautiously and ventured in with a decidedly sympathetic feeling for all housebreakers.

I crept across the room on tiptoe and peered through the keyhole of a door which had of a sudden obligingly shut itself. In the light of living room beyond I could discern three figures.

Mimosa San and a good-looking young man in earnest conversation, while a maid, efficient woman of warm, Oriental beauty peered the door watching them with emotions which any editor of a column of advice to lovers must have found easy to interpret.

Her Happiness Regained
Mimosa San's happiness was hers again—that was evident. Her ivory cheeks were rose-flushed, her eyes sparkled and there was no tremulous sweetness about her lips. She seemed utterly oblivious of everything in the world but the maid at her side and utterly conscious of every glance and intonation which emanated from him.

And the beautiful woman who was pacing the floor so feverishly had the tragic look of the ignored "tertium-quisque."

The maid, who I knew at once to be Helen Stans, was talking earnestly, but with a total lack of consideration for the eavesdropping Miss Fairfax. So I cut off my own view and put my ear to the keyhole instead. Still I could hear nothing and I had a feverish feeling that it was my duty to overhear something—the situation lay before me undeniably, mysterious.

I must manage to gather the information Jimmy needed, in spite of the fact that I was pathetically ignorant as to what was needed. Remember that I stood there would never adjust herself in the vicissitudes of a newspaper career and the vagaries of newspaper work.

Such thoughts fitted through my brain as I continued in my quest of Peeping Tom. At last I got the view of interest I was seeking. Through a window on one of the upper floors I caught a glimpse of the little Mimosa San. I opened the window cautiously and ventured in with a decidedly sympathetic feeling for all housebreakers.

Mimosa San's happiness was hers again—that was evident. Her ivory cheeks were rose-flushed, her eyes sparkled and there was no tremulous sweetness about her lips. She seemed utterly oblivious of everything in the world but the maid at her side and utterly conscious of every glance and intonation which emanated from him.

And the beautiful woman who was pacing the floor so feverishly had the tragic look of the ignored "tertium-quisque."

The maid, who I knew at once to be Helen Stans, was talking earnestly, but with a total lack of consideration for the eavesdropping Miss Fairfax. So I cut off my own view and put my ear to the keyhole instead. Still I could hear nothing and I had a feverish feeling that it was my duty to overhear something—the situation lay before me undeniably, mysterious.

I must manage to gather the information Jimmy needed, in spite of the fact that I was pathetically ignorant as to what was needed. Remember that I stood there would never adjust herself in the vicissitudes of a newspaper career and the vagaries of newspaper work.

Such thoughts fitted through my brain as I continued in my quest of Peeping Tom. At last I got the view of interest I was seeking. Through a window on one of the upper floors I caught a glimpse of the little Mimosa San. I opened the window cautiously and ventured in with a decidedly sympathetic feeling for all housebreakers.

DIRECTLY my message came to Jimmy Barton, he had a dinner and a ray of hope that they would arrive within the half hour, and Jimmy had asked me to "hold the fort" in the meanwhile.

So I made my adventurous little climb up the fire escape, peering in window after window on my upward journey.

Darkness had fallen and the moon had not yet risen to soften the night with its silver sheen. Each apartment into which I peered had a look of warm coziness.

I felt rather pathetic and abused when I reflected that all these people were safe hours, and I was enjoying their dinners while I was groping around in the darkness.

I crept across the room on tiptoe and peered through the keyhole of a door which had of a sudden obligingly shut itself. In the light of living room beyond I could discern three figures.

Mimosa San and a good-looking young man in earnest conversation, while a maid, efficient woman of warm, Oriental beauty peered the door watching them with emotions which any editor of a column of advice to lovers must have found easy to interpret.

door. I opened it quietly and stepped into the room. We were four to three now. What hope was there that our enemy could escape? A second later Moran whipped out a gun and ordered Sates to put up his hands.

With eager attention, I watched the workmanlike way in which Detective Moran searched the Zap. Presently his cleverness was rewarded, for he discovered a blue envelope which he handed to Brayton, who received it as if it were a kidnapped child magically restored to its parent.

No one was paying any attention to Little Mimosa San. Suddenly she drew a gun from the folds of her kimono and aimed it at the man. Instinctively they released Sates. A gun in the hands of a woman is a fearsome thing.

Through the doorway into the inner room from which I had come, holding the attacking force of bayonets, I was backed after him and closed the door.

I caught his arm. "Let her have him. We leave the launch," I said. And the little launch bore Mimosa San and her lover off across a wake of moonlight to a new world.

Our Wonderful World

Investigations made by a doctor leads him to conclude that musicians who play and instruments are exceptionally long-lived.

Concert players are credited by him with an average life of 61 years. Clarinet players are next, with 64; the average above and the bassoon live to be about 63 years.

The lowest duration of life by these players of wind instruments are men who handle the flute. Because of the formation of their instruments, they do not have opportunity for full exercise of their lungs.

Therefore the flute player, according to him, will not live to be an average of 51 years.

It is interesting to observe the number of seemingly dead men who are members of orchestras. The theatre orchestra that does not make by one or two men who have left their late for behind with the years, or so gray that they appear well upon the century, is an exception.

The proof is that a steady and moderate daily use of the lungs, which is called out by the necessity of professional duty, is responsible for the remarkably high average of existence.

What Do You Wish to Be?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I would be true, for there are those who trust me.

I would be pure, for there are those who care.

I would be strong, for there is much to suffer.

I would be brave, for there is much to fear.

I would be friend of all—the foe, the friendless.

I would be giving and forget the gift.

I would be humble, for I know my weakness.

I would look up and laugh—and love—and lift.

It is a human tendency to be very critical of everyone and every thing except oneself. It is fairly natural to get a market and a series of ideals by which to measure other people. But to have personal ideals ought to be a good thing and instructive.

However, more and more the world is getting to be a more personal concern. More and more we hold ourselves to a standard and more and more we live by big, big, beautiful dreams.

One of the sweetest and simplest personal dreams I know is embodied in the little verse I have given you today. It expresses many of the things one ought to be and do.

(You must cultivate trust in one's nature and in the goodness of those who trust and to oneself, too. All of us owe it to ourselves to be big and fine and splendid—and owe it, too, to those who could be

"How would you like to get out of the city over Saturday and Sunday?" said Warren, coming home early to find Helen almost exhausted with the heat.

"Oh, Warren! can you get away early tomorrow?" Helen queried.

Warren had been staying late every Saturday afternoon for extra business, and Helen had steadfastly refused to leave the city when he could not join her week-ends at the beach.

"Sure I can. I'm going to take it off, no matter what comes up. I hate the idea of leaving you here in this terrible heat and you might be alone," she said gaily. "You look as if you had something up your sleeve."

"I have—and you'll be crazy about it. In fact, I told Tom we'd come."

"Like to be here if it helps you any," Helen replied, catching his hand and holding it against her face for a second.

"Well, you look as if you had something up your sleeve," he said, kissing her more tenderly than usual.

Anecdotes of the Famous

Several stories illustrating the superstitious nature of Harriet are told in a book just published. His horror of the color green has been touched upon by many writers.

He was just with any tinge of green in it, and he objected to anything like a green wall paper.

His aversion to the color that one day when a lady whom he knew had come to see him, he became the House of Commons he refused to have her in the room because she was wearing a green dress, and hurried her from the room as fast as possible.

He also had a horror of the number 13. Once, during an election he was told that the room number 13 in a country house, "was

"Don't be a idiot," said Warren impatiently. "You know what I mean. She writes cleverly and she always has a dozen or so men hanging about her. No woman knows how to handle them."

Warren had said enough to reduce Helen to pandemonium, but she didn't care. "And what is more," Warren continued, "you'll either go down to the beach with me tomorrow, or I'll have to go alone."

Helen was on the point of telling him that she was what he would have to do when she suddenly remembered that she had never seen Mr. Curtis' new mind."

"And Frances, who has been seen that something was wrong, hurried Helen off to her own room where the two women looked at each other for a minute."

"Frances was thinking rapidly. 'I have a plan,' she said finally, 'but you must be willing to play the game, and not be cross when I tell you what it is.'"

"Helen looked interested, and Frances began to eagerly outline her plan."
